Producer Overview	The cellars of Moulin Touchais must contain one of the largest and oldest collections of any winery anywhere in the world, with several miles of underground cellars containing nearly two million bottles at any one time, including a rare collection of ancient wines, the oldest dating back to the mid to late 19th century. History documents that the first sweet wines were produced along the banks of the Layon in 1579, with Dutch merchants encouraging their production, since they appeared to have the stamina to survive the journey by boat back to the Low Countries. Whilst the family Touchais cannot claim to have pioneered the production of moelleux wine, their ancestors were certainly making wine as long ago as 1787. Read more online
