Producer Overview	This winery is situated in the Weinviertel area of Austria north west of Vienna, close to the border with the Czech Republic. The family has been growing vines in the area since the 17th century but it is only in the last 50 years that the estate has grown from 3 hectares to become the largest winery in Austria with over 190 hectares and tank storage facilities for 12 million litres. This was achieved by Wolfgang Baumgartner and then his son Wieland buying up vineyard land when it was available cheaply and by pursuing a policy of making wines and processing grapes for other companies, including for the 300 members of the local co-operative and they are the largest producers of Weinviertel DAC wines.
